Announcing LTD 2009-2010 Season

West Hartford: For the 2009-2010 season LTD will offer two programs, Tree Wise and Stories in my Pocket. For those who book more than one performance, either or both programs can be booked to perform the same day.

Tree Wise is an original script created for our Little Theatre of the Deaf company based on the children's book of the same title. Tree Wise tells the story of a boy who has Deaf parents and has made a friend with a girl at school. Through the help of a very special tree, the boy learns how to help his new friend and classmates understand more about Deaf Culture. The tree teaches sign language to the children ...and to our audience through sign language games.

Our new program; Stories in My Pocket, draws on the large repertory of stories, fables, poems and riddles the Little Theatre of the Deaf has pocketed in its 40-year history. Some of our favorites will be popped into large pockets on the stage. The actors will choose volunteers from the audience to pick stories to be performed. What's in the yellow pocket? Will it be Aesop Fables? Will it be a Native American legend? Will it be an African riddle? What ever they will choose it will enrapture, entertain and educate.

The Little Theatre of the Deaf, comprised of Deaf and Hearing Actors, performs the entire 50-minute program completely in American Sign Language and the spoken word. The Little Theatre of the Deaf entertains as it educates, the audience SEES and HEARS every word.

Our Little Theatre of the Deaf program as an educational/outreach partner with the schools provides teachers with our Learn and Study Together Guide containing material about the performance, exercises and activities to do in the classroom pre and post performance, even including sign language lessons. Working hand in hand with curriculum, our performance and guide provide experiences and exercises to further the education of curriculum disciplines, social values of diversity, culture awareness, social studies, and more! Additionally, students will be exposed to a less-known culture from our own United States.

Family Festival Brings Children of All Abilities Together

WASHINGTON, May 13, 2009 – Vibrant art workshops and dynamic stage performances will enliven the Kogod Courtyard of the Smithsonian American Art Museum from June 5-6 as VSA arts presents its annual Start with the Arts Family Festival. Named after Start with the Arts, VSA arts' early childhood educational resources for teachers and parents, the festival spotlights the work of performing and teaching artists with disabilities and brings children of all abilities together through the arts. This year's festival goes "green," with activities focused on helping take care of the Earth.

"VSA arts is committed to creating opportunities for all people to come together and create together. The Start with the Arts Festival allows us as a community to celebrate creativity," said Soula Antoniou, president of VSA arts. "This year's art activities are especially relevant, as our society tries to be more environmentally friendly."

The 2008-2009 VSA arts Teaching Artists Fellows and others will lead lively, interactive art workshops on both days. Children of all ages can decorate their own canvas bag with Karen Brown and Kong Ho. Fran Sillau and Shaq Kalaj will bring participants on a creative journey involving storytelling and the visual arts as they delve into the adventures of Anansi the Spider. Children and adults alike can make and play musical instruments from household materials with Derek Mortland and Glenn McClure.

On Friday only, environmental arts troupe Bash the Trash will teach children how to create musical instruments from recycled materials and then give a concert with these unique instruments.

Family-friendly performances are also scheduled throughout Saturday. Featured performers include The Dancing Wheels Company and Little Theatre of the Deaf. The Dancing Wheels Company revolutionizes the concept of physically integrated dance, opening the doors for thousands of artists with and without disabilities to perform together on an equal basis. Tony Award®-winning Little Theatre of the Deaf will present its new production Tree Wise, which tells the story of a boy who has Deaf parents and has made a friend at school. Through the help of an extraordinary tree, the boy learns how to help his new friend and classmates understand more about Deaf culture. The tree teaches sign language to the children (and audience) through games.

Concurrently, the children's art exhibition "Celebrating Who I Am" is also on display at Union Station, 40 Massachusetts Ave., N.E., from June 1-21. The exhibition includes artwork from a child in each state and the District of Columbia who were selected in response to VSA arts' and CVS Caremark All Kids Can's joint call for art earlier this year. Reproductions of ten pieces of artwork from the Union Station exhibition will also be on display in Kogod Courtyard.

The festival is free and open to the public from 11:30 a.m.-5 p.m. both days. The Smithsonian American Art Museum is located at 8th and F Streets, NW. For more information, please visit www.vsarts.org or call (202) 628-2800.
